BACK BONE NOT WISH BONE

Most of us are dreamers—dreamers from childhood to old age. We imagine ourselves other than we are, and we long for other surroundings, other conditions, other opportunities. We sometimes think that if we had other people's chances it would be entirely different with us. And not infrequently do we picture ourselves even doing better than those whom we emulate. We dream and we wish, but we get no where.

In a chicken the breast bone is called the wish bone, and many of us are not only chicken-hearted but have this wish bone abnormally developed. Of course there is no harm in wishing, however ardently, for better things. And in fact one's achievements depend to a greater or less degree upon the wish for something different, something better. But nothing is ever accomplished by merely wishing. It is will that achieves, and will is back bone, not wish bone.

The wish bone is rarely wanting, but back bone is a less common possession. Let us grow more back bone.

quite a large crowd. Rev. A. Cornelius of Merhons expects to preach at Scaffold Cane next Saturday at 3 p. m. and Sunday at 11 a. m. Every body is invited to come. Mr. T. C. WHAT THE LITTLE BIRD TOLD ME

A little bird sat on a near-by fence And sang and warbled to his heart's content.

He sang of the SPRING and the sunshine free, Of his treasures rare, his blue eggs three.

He preened his feathers and sang with glee—

"Some day they'll be birdies, just like me."

"Some day they'll open their little mouths wide

For me to place berries and worms inside.

How I'll scour the country far and near

For food for my little ones, Oh, so dear!"

"Tee-wee! Tee-wee!" sang he with glee,

"Some day they'll be birdies just like me."

"Oh! this is the reason, you pussy—
